At the time of preparing this Policy these changes are yet to come into force. Until such time as these changes come into force references in this Policy to the “Information Commission” (and any associated expressions) should be treated as a reference to the Information Commissioner.

2 Legislation

- 2.1 It is a legal requirement that the Group must collect, handle and store personal information in accordance with relevant legislation.
- 2.2 The relevant legislation in relation to the processing of data is:
 - the UK General Data Protection Regulation (“the GDPR”)
 - the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003
 - the Data Protection Act 2018 (“the DPA”)

- 3.3 The Group also holds Personal Data that is sensitive in nature (i.e., relates to or reveals a data subject's racial or ethnic origin, religious beliefs, political opinions, relates to health or sexual orientation). This is "Special Category Personal Data" or "Sensitive Personal Data". The Secretary of State may designate further categories of Special Category Personal Data and if this occurs the Group shall treat any such designated data accordingly.

- 4.7 In the event that the Group requires to obtain consent to process a Data Subject's Personal Data, it shall obtain that consent in writing (unless extenuating circumstances apply). The consent provided by the Data Subject must be freely given and the Data Subject will be required to sign a relevant consent form if willing to consent (again, subject to extenuating circumstances such as the Data Subject being able to write).
- 4.8 Any consent to be obtained by the Group must be for a specific and defined purpose (i.e., general consent cannot be sought). Where consent is being relied on, Data Subjects are free to withhold their consent or withdraw it at any future time.

The DPO must also consider whether it is appropriate to notify those Data Subjects affected by the breach.
